Five fast facts

Here are the essential facts you need to know about the latest stimulus funding, also known as ESSER III or the American Rescue Plan (ARP).

1

A large amount of money is coming to schools and districts.

ESSER III provides more money to K–12 education than any other stimulus bill: $122 billion. These funds come on top of the $67 billion from ESSER I and II.

2

Schools and districts have a lot of leeway in how to use the money.

ESSER III funds may be used to propel your vision of teaching and learning post-pandemic, so try to think about both short-term needs and your longer term ambitions for the district.

At least 20 percent must be used to address unfinished learning.

For example, schools and districts can use the funding to bolster the strength of in-school core instruction, differentiated practice, and intervention, as well as for summer learning, after school, and extended day activities.

4

The money is available soon. Schools and districts can access ESSER III funds beginning May 24, 2021, and the money may be used through September 30, 2024.

5

If you've already applied for federal ESSER I (CARES) funding, it's okay. Just keep this in mind: The U.S. DOE recommends that districts use remaining ESSER I funds before accessing ESSER II and III stimulus funds, because the deadline for ESSER I money comes first.

Timelines for funding

	ESSER I (CARES)	ESSER II (CRRSA)	ESSER III (ARP)
